WESTWARD HO! —TO— NEW HORIZONS

Buckle your belt, hop on your steed and bob along with the Forty-niners through the thirty-second edition of the Retro.

As the pioneers of 1849 went out in search of gold, so the modern students progress through high school. They meet much the same problems with very similar reactions fortified by very similar character traits.

As it took courage to progress through the unconquered territory, so it takes the same kind of fortitude to excel in classes, to study complex courses, and to stick it out right up to "Pomp and Circumstance."

Courage alone isn't enough to gain these students' destination. Vigor to carry out these plans of action is a prime factor, as is ambition to succeed and initiative to go forth on one's own.

So with due honor and respect to our ancestors, we, the staff of the '49 Retro, welcome you to the 1949 version of WESTWARD HO!

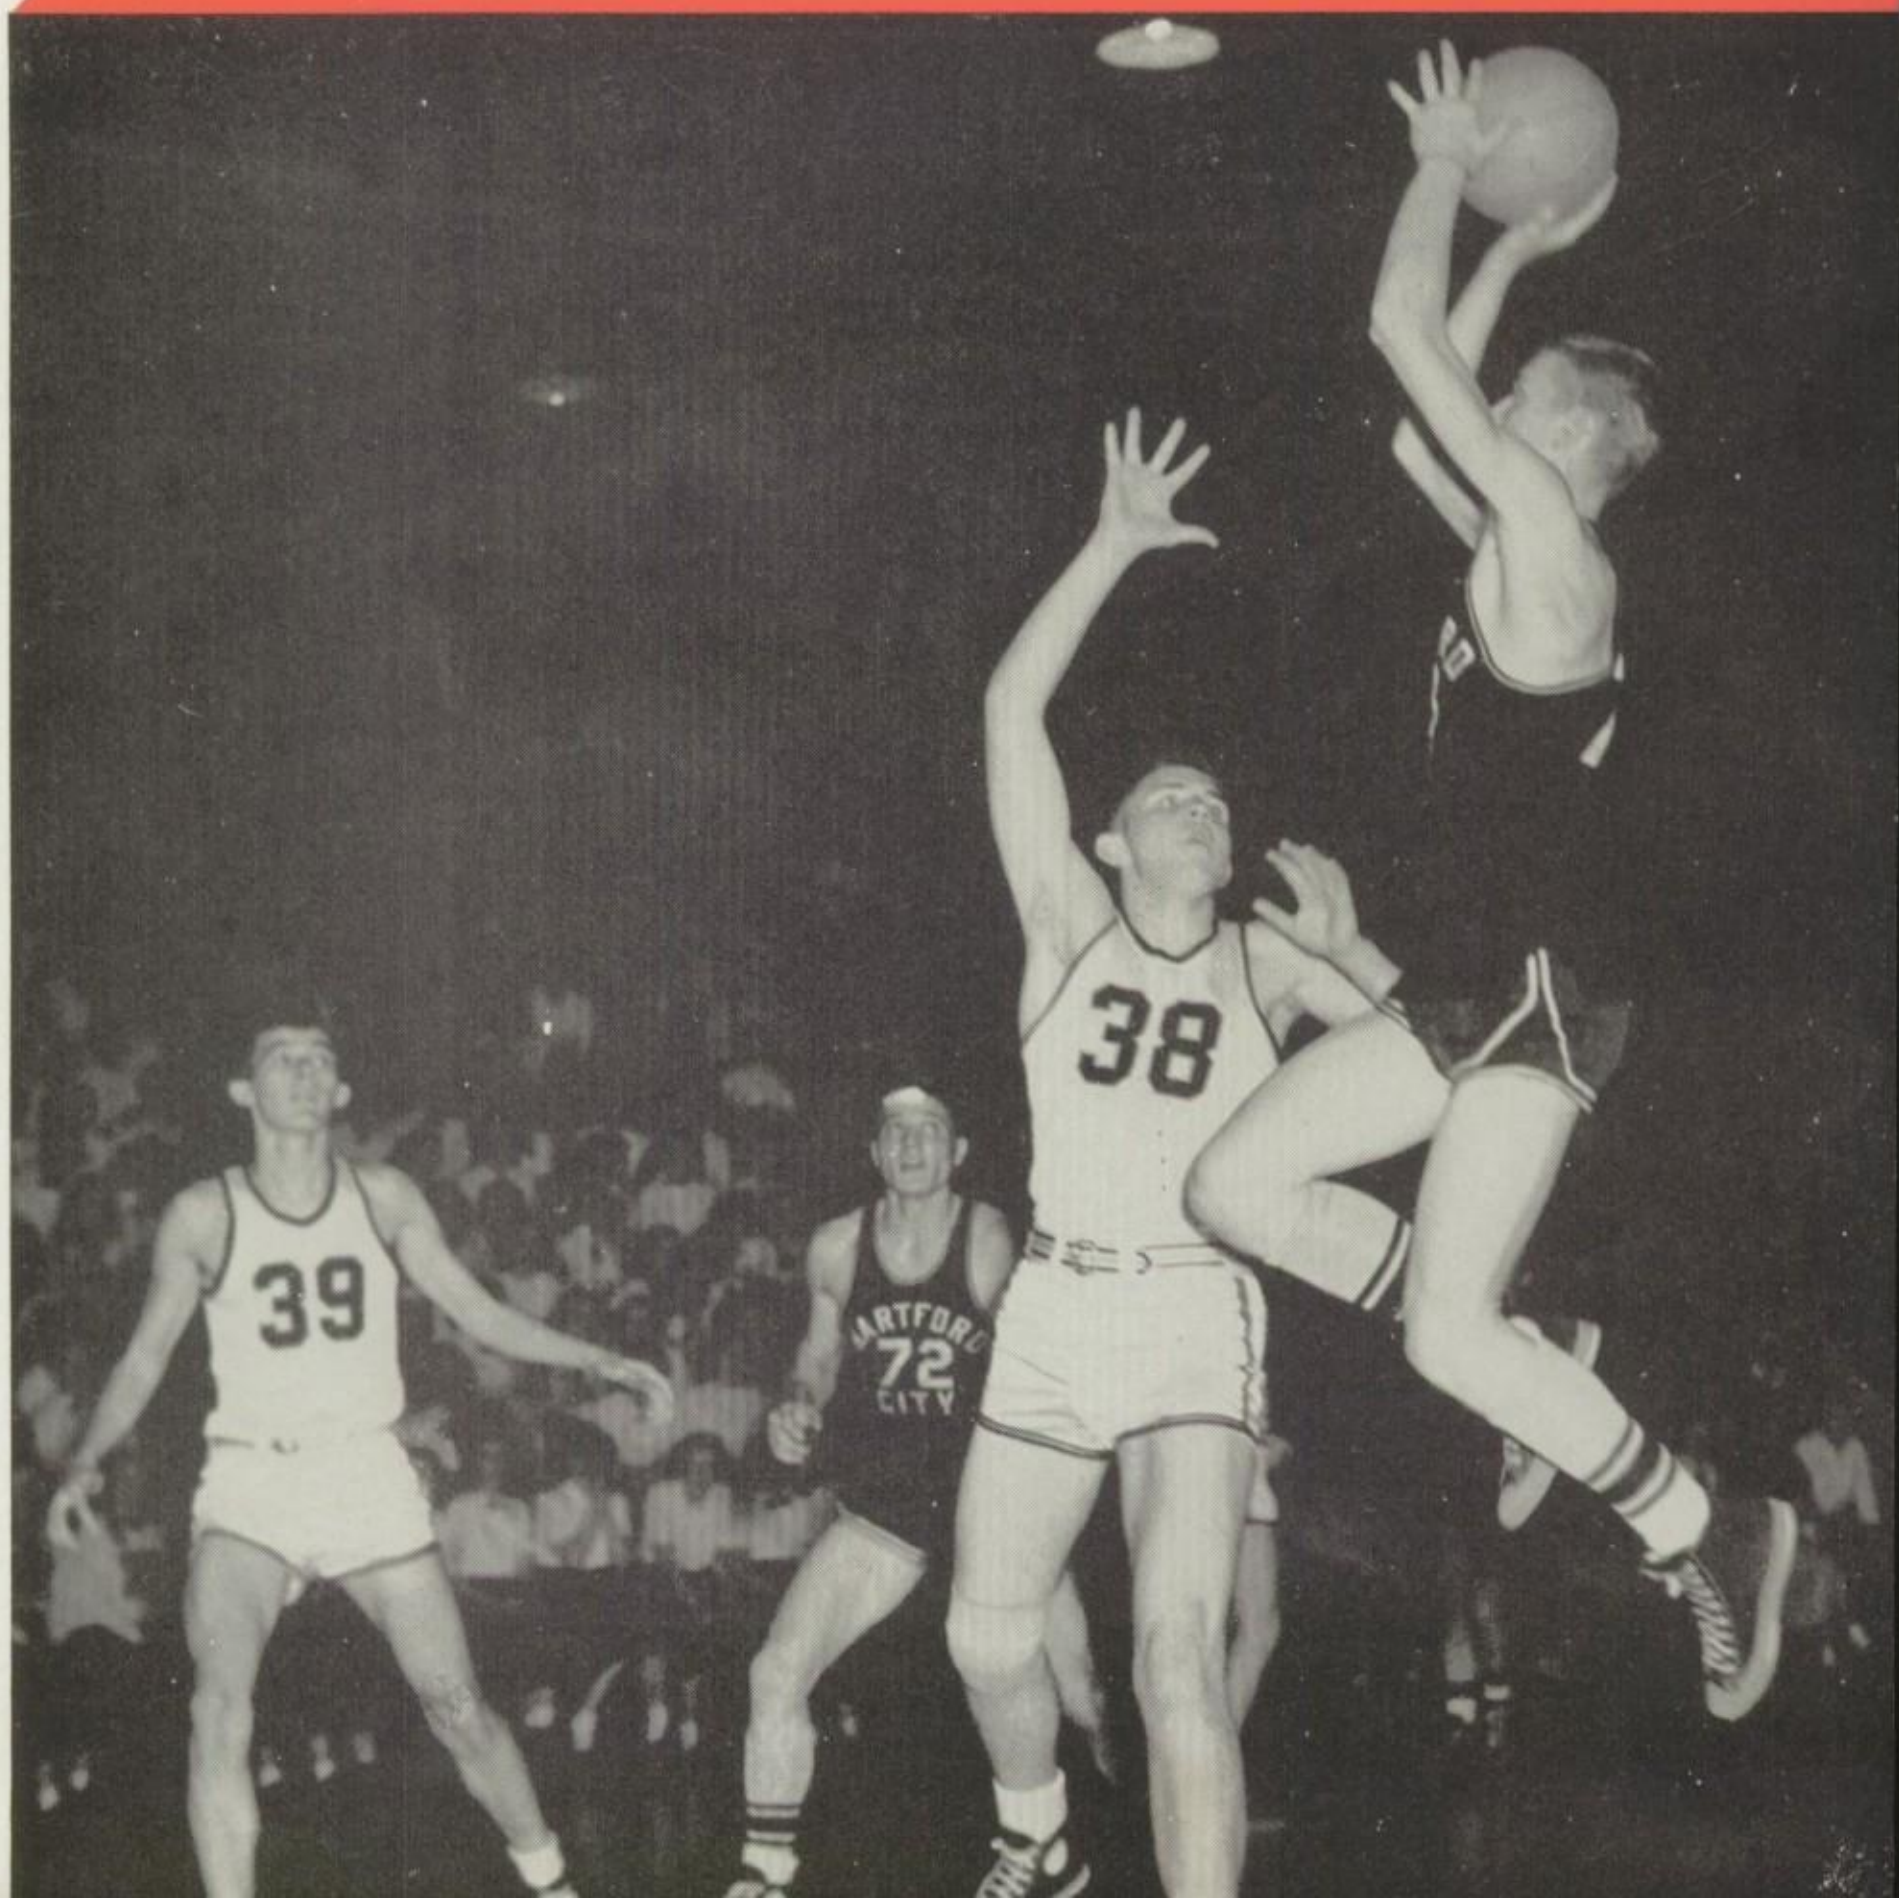

Delving into the unpredictable mysteries of chemical strife, Jackie Kirkwood and Carolyn Shrack exemplify courage of the pioneers who plunged into the unexplored West.

COURAGE

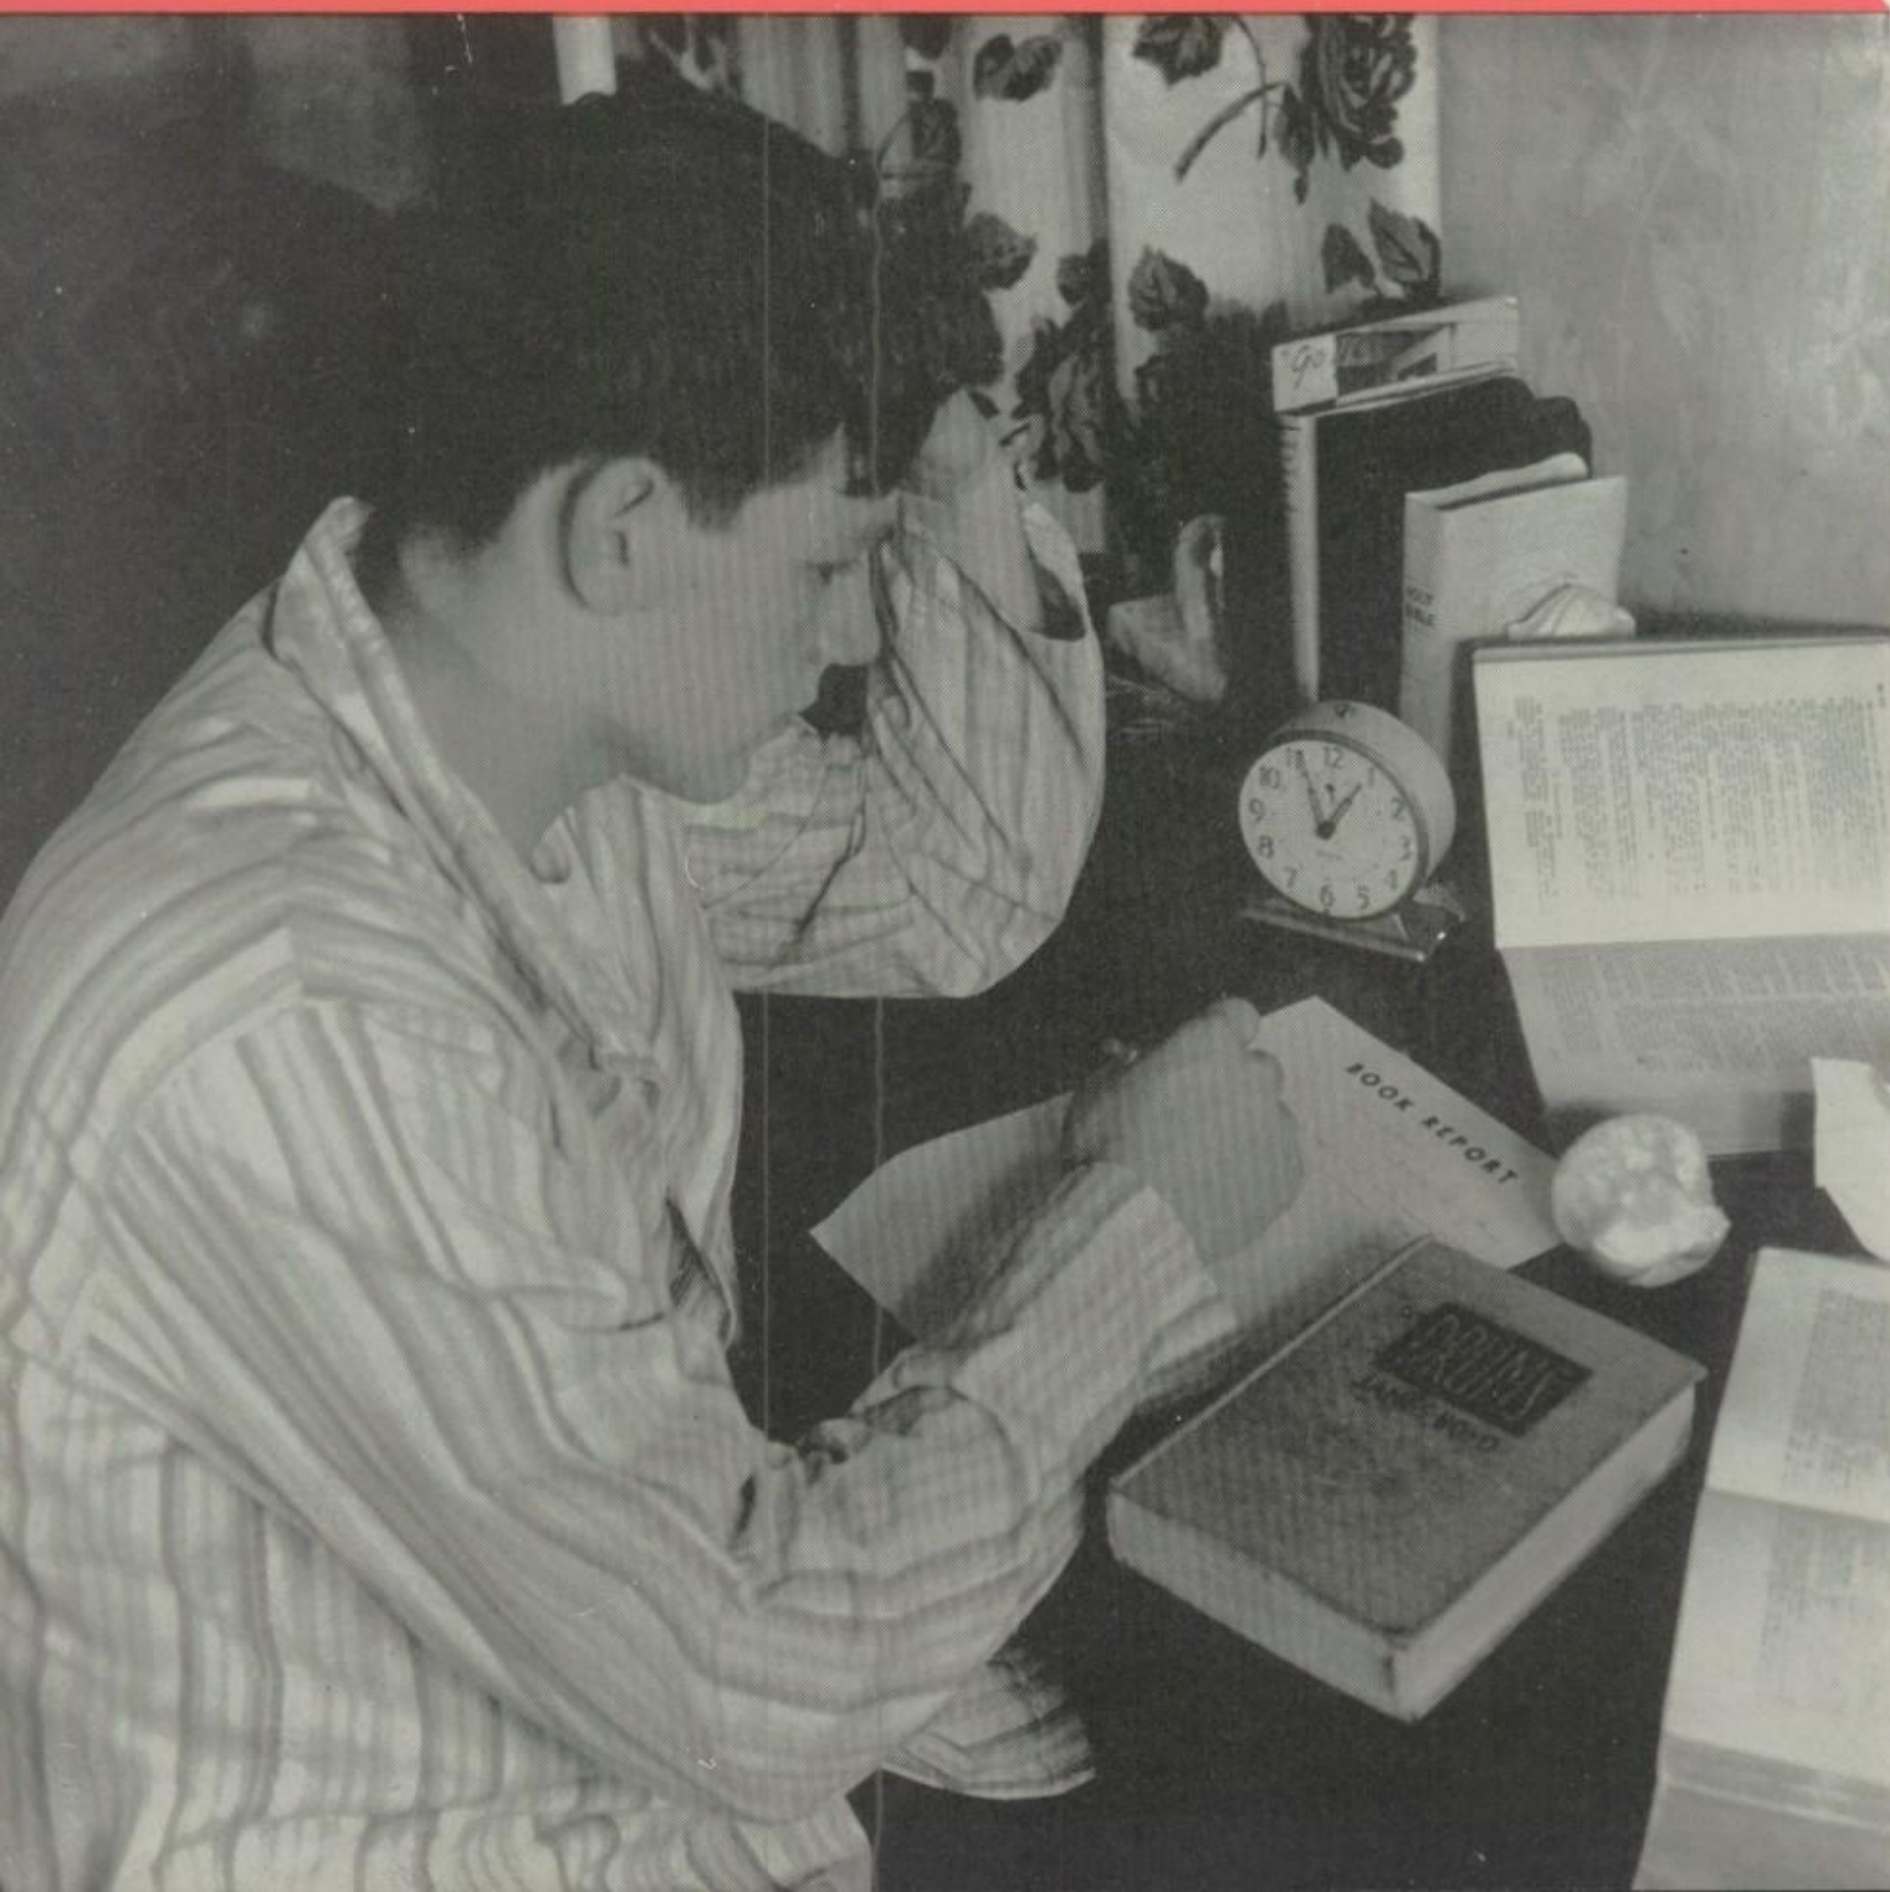

VIGOR

Hardy constitutions, a heritage of the ancestral Forty-niners, survives in athletes like Dick Kimmel through skirmishes with the Indians — here the Wabash Apaches.

PERSEVERANCE

An eleventh-hour book report by junior Jack Campbell typifies the perseverance that the forefathers used to cross the continent despite hardships.

Senior Bob Drake, completely on his own, displays true pioneer initiative here in constructing an oscilloscope to compete for a scholarship in science.

"TRIPS" ARE SUPERVISED

E. P. Blackburn

Paralleling his success as overseer of the city educational program is Superintendent E. P. Blackburn's mastery of acquiring innumerable friends among the public and student body.

Clifford Kraning, Cecil Gough, and George Fulton, members of the school board, take a short breather while checking the school budget for the fading year.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Row Two: Shirley Crockett, Janet Willman, Patty Miller, Mary Lou Lyons, Carolyn Shrack, Loretta Price, Tom Brown.

Row Three: Wanda McColum, Alberta Smith, Lois Ann Lake, Mary Sparks, Theresa Norris, Marlene Ault, Margaret Felger.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION OFFICERS

Mrs. Mary Ellen Herbaugh, vice-president; Miss Helen Seelig, treasurer; Miss Ruth Cole, president; Mrs. Marion Williamson, secretary.

PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION OFFICERS

Row One: Mrs. Ralph Knoderer, membership chairman; Mrs. Mary Arbuckle, program chairman; Mrs. Roy Casterline, historian; Mrs. Herman Felger, finance chairman.

Row Two: Mr. Sam Hollis, president; Mrs. Vaughn Johnson, vice-president; Mrs. Raymond Needler, secretary; Mr. Lawrence Brown, treasurer.

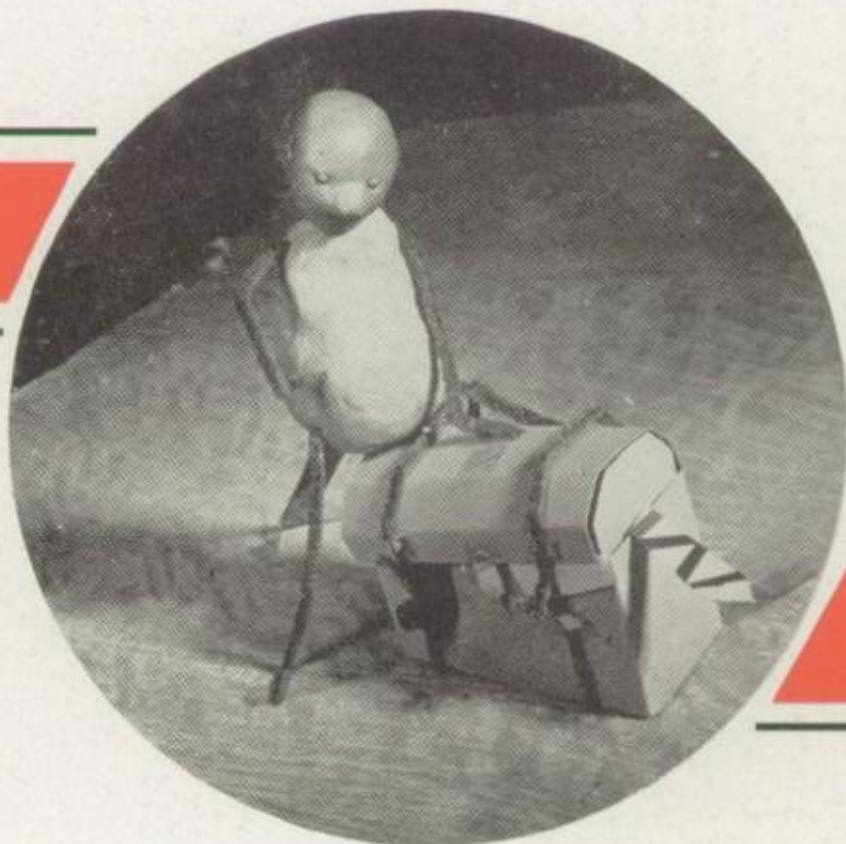

PACK UP YOUR BELONGINGS

THE CARAVAN

IF we could have peered into the covered wagons as the old caravans rolled along, we would have found the group included many different types of people. But no matter what the type or where they came from, their destination was the same. Opening the doors of Hartford High, we find many of the same types of people that crossed the plains a century before us; and all of these, too, are striving for the same goal. But this time the aim is education rather than gold. As each pioneer caravan had its leader, so the students look to someone for a guiding hand. In our "school caravan" we present the student body with the class officers and sponsors who lighted the way for many weary travelers.

'TOPS' IN PERSONALITY

FUN - AS YOU LIKE IT

CAMPFIRE TIME

AT the close of a weary day's traveling, the Forty-niners of a century ago would draw their wagons into a circle, light a campfire, and entertain themselves with songs and stories. Today the Forty-niners entertain themselves in a more modern version of the same routine. The students find relaxation in various forms of extra-curricular activities, as the numerous school dances, class parties, Hi-Y and Y-Teens banquets, band trips, and the prom. In the following pages we proudly present the Forty-niners of the twentieth century as they spent their hours after closing their books for the more informal part of a school year.

BAND OFFICERS

Bill Davis, president

Rosemary McKee,
vice-president

Lois Ann Lake,
secretary-treasurer.

Jacki Sue Wright, librarian.

Jim Johnston, drum major.

Preparing to give his proteges the "go" sign by a wave of the baton is maestro Robert Hawkins, head of instrumental music.

Row Three: Faith Ann Hile, Lois Brands, Nancy Snell, Phillip Smith, Judy Hughes, Janet Willman, Fred Sills, Sherman Sills, Bill Davis, Gerald Leech, Bryce Willman, Suzanne Behnen, Margaret Amos, Shirley Roderick, Don Rumbaugh, Jacki Sue Wright, Wanda McCollum, Ann Rawlings, Sylvia Overmyer.

STRIKING A GOLDEN TONE

Whether it is the banjo of a westward-bound pioneer at the close of a weary day or the steady beat of the high school band, we all know that music is a "must." Giving us our music in a variety of styles is the concert band, consisting of fifty-three members, the marching, and the newly-organized pep bands.

Long hours of practice and sectional rehearsals plus a bit of initiative and integrity on the part of each member have made this high school organization an outstanding feature of the community.

Then comes the reward for those hard hours of toil. Another shiny medal with a blue ribbon is added to the row proudly displayed on each member's uniform. In February thirty-eight of the music makers traveled to Kokomo for the Northern Indiana Association Solo and Ensemble Contest, returning with sixteen first division wins. In March first division winners attempted to conquer the state title at Indianapolis.

Hartford City played host to the participants of the district band contest in April, where classes BB, C, CC, D, and E met to battle for a first division win. The state play-off for first division winners was held at Auburn on April 9. Combining with the chorus, the band wound up the season with two concerts.

Let us not forget the one to whom much credit for these achievements must go. To Mr. Robert Hawkins, band director, we give our thanks and appreciation for making listening pleasant.

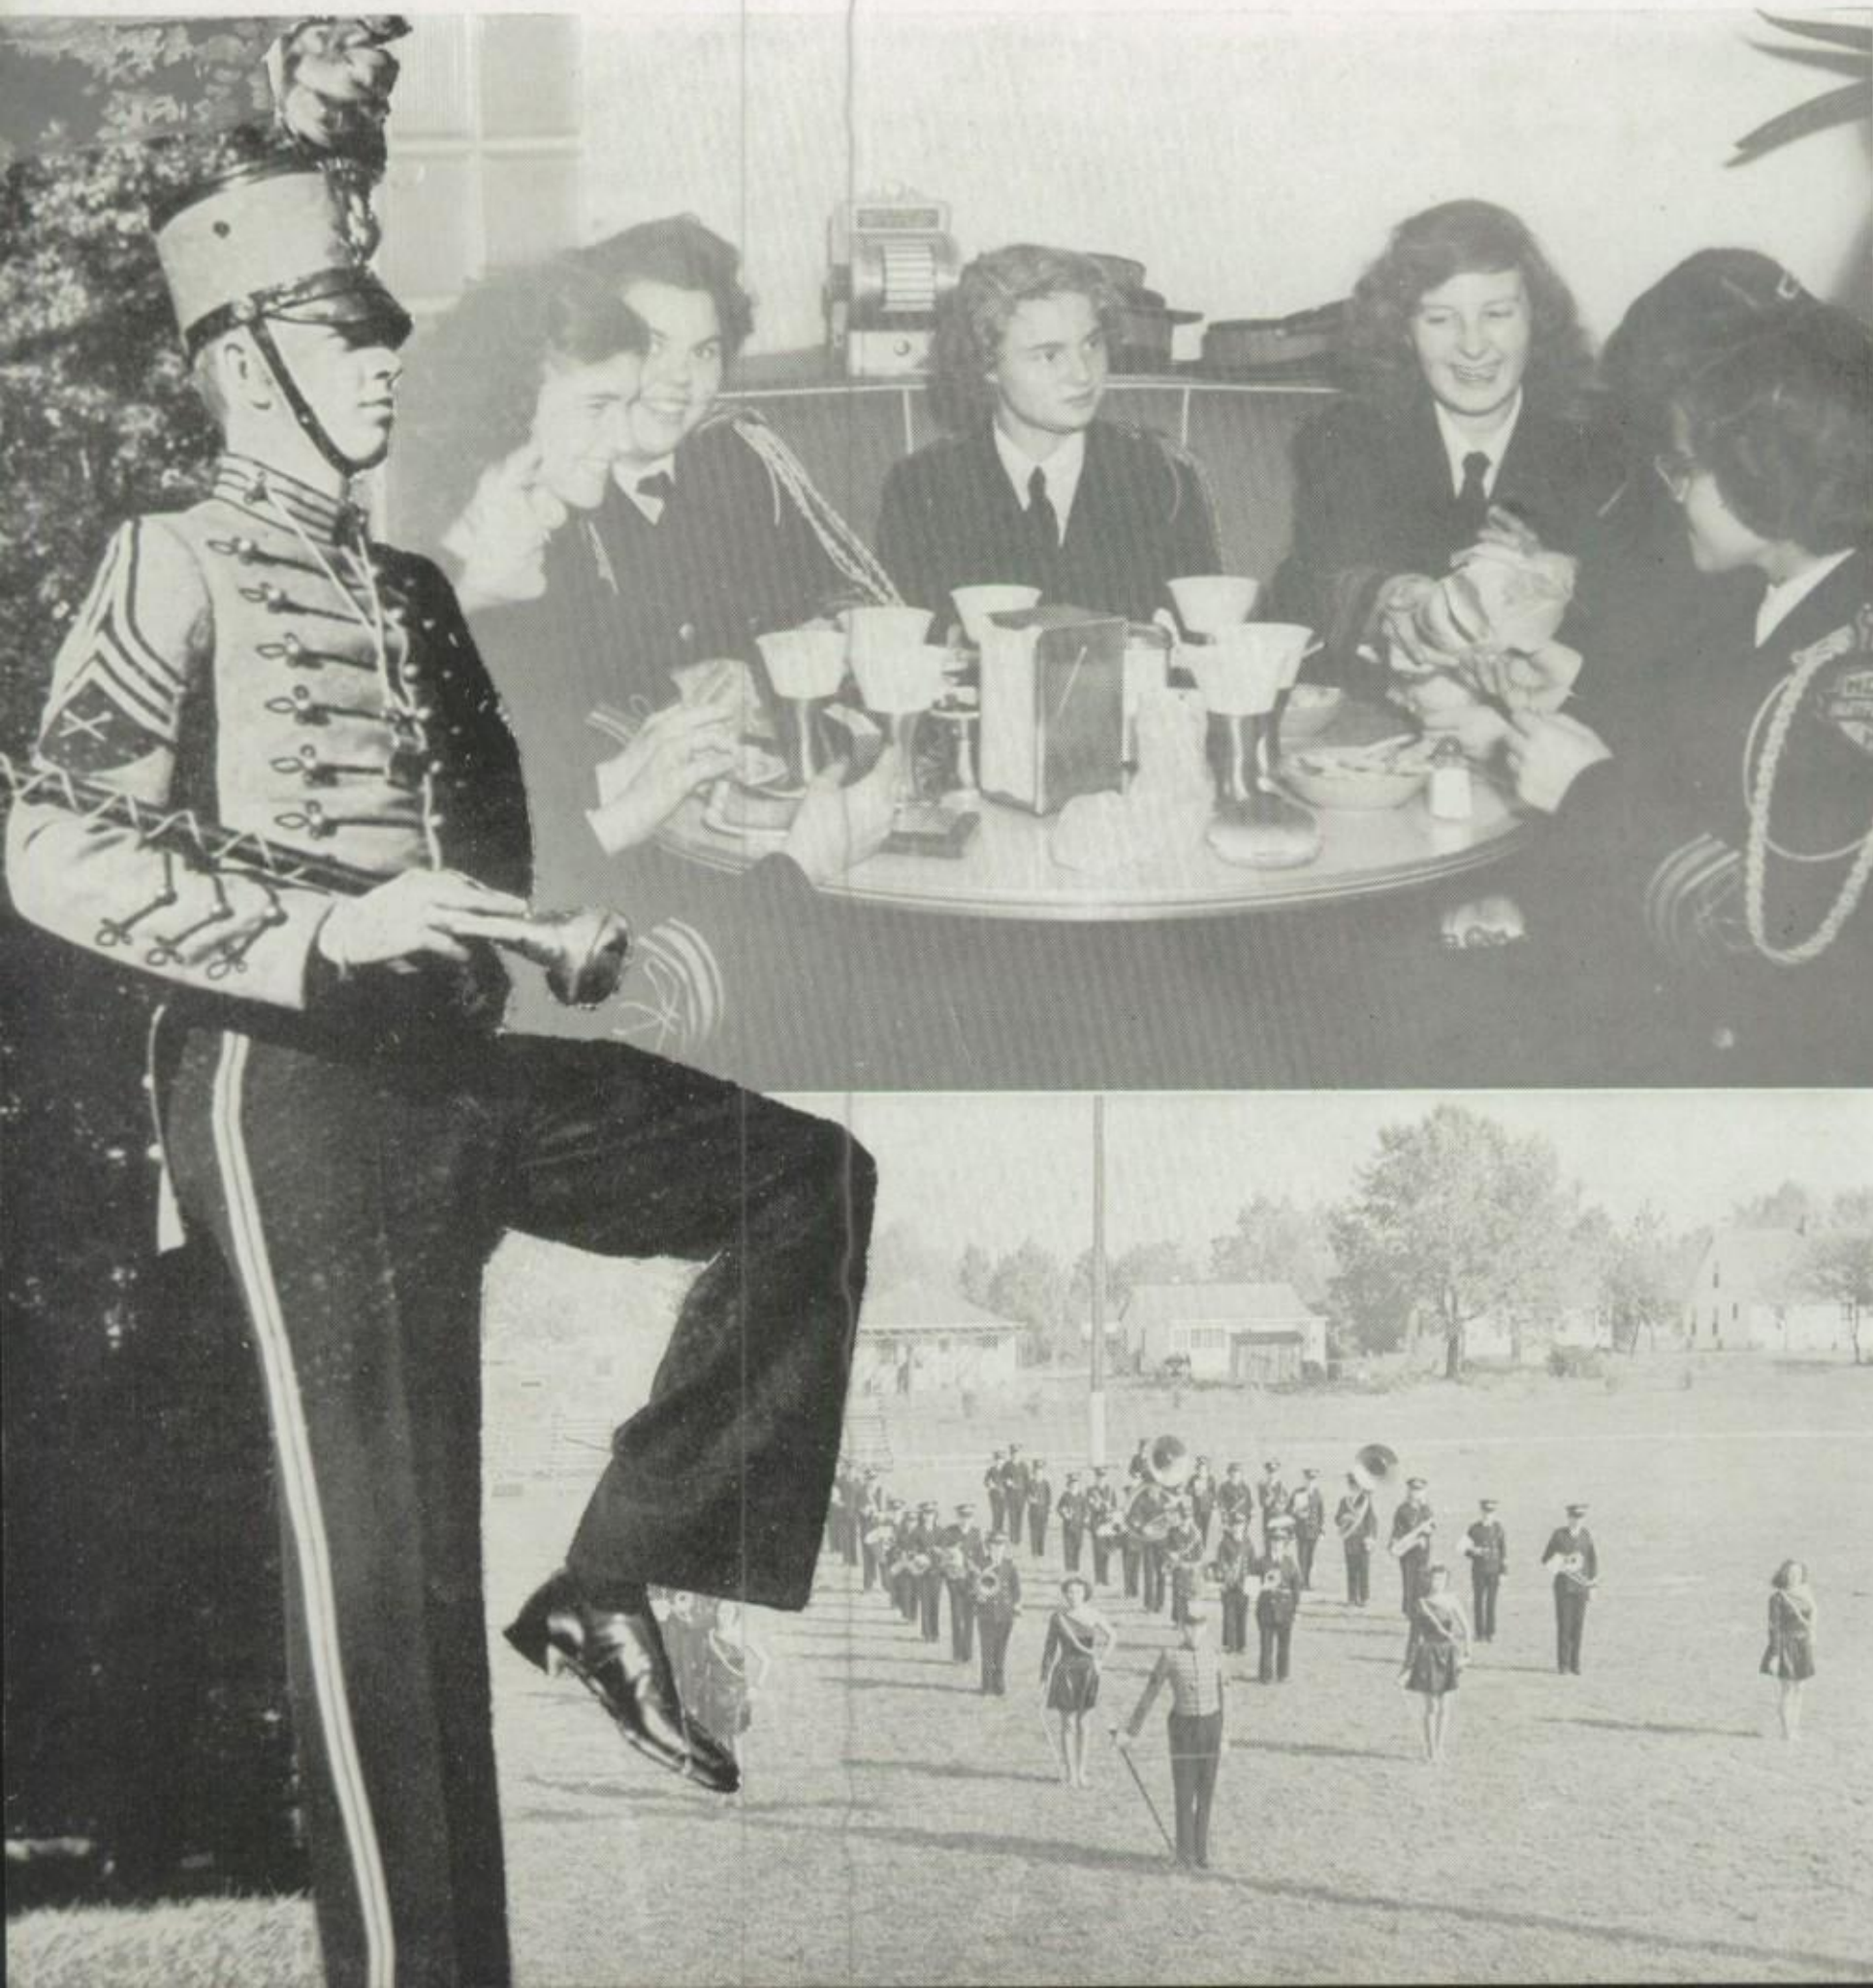

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT

Just when you think the cold has gotten the best of you at a football game, what puts that extra zip in the crowd? 'Tis none other than the peppy music and snappy routines of the marching band. Acting under the whistle of Jim Johnston, drum major, the band has become a fixed part of the football game intermissions. Taking trips and playing in contests was also part of the band's schedule.

Strutting under the plume is drum major Jim Johnston.

The year 1949 brought a new sparkle in the marching band. New uniforms of black satin with gold trimming were purchased for the five majorettes.

Returning to school in the fall of '48, students were astounded to find the old gymnasium had been converted into a new girls' locker and band room complete with three small practice quarters, instructor's office, instrument and practice rooms for the entire band. Added to the band's equipment was a stroboscope, an instrument which assures correct pitch.

Proving a very valuable side-kick to Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Harlan Kerlin took charge as assistant director, operating the wire recorder and coaching the solo and ensemble groups.

MIXED CHORUS

Row One: R. Coons, E. Robbins, L. Redding, A. Herbaugh, F. Evilsizer, R. Miller, A. Slater, J. Felger, J. Gadbury.

Row Three: D. Rumbaugh, J. Wright, V. Landaker, S. Callender, J. Overmyer, J. Reasoner, D. Van Horn, A. Rabbitt.

IN SINGING

Maintaining charm and patience with her music classes, Miss Nesbit, music supervisor, skilfully conducted the boys' and girls' glee clubs and the newly organized mixed chorus.

Pointing toward the season's main events, the Christmas program, duo concerts with the band, baccalaureate and commencement, the vocal groups strove hard to master their numbers and present them to the public in an interesting fashion.

THE 1949 RETRO STAFF

STRUCK IT RICH--THE RETRO

Annabel Alexander, editor-in-chief.
Virgil Johnson, assistant business manager.
Rosemary McKee, assistant editor.

- Voters show some "cents" in choosing the queen at a Retro benefit dance, where Patty Tudor reigned.

Beverly Morrical, copy editor.
Phil Blackburn, business manager.
Jo Ann Norris, activities editor.

- Dick Poivre, Donna Kellogg, and Rosemary McKee seem to enjoy recovering money from class picture envelopes headed for the furnace.

Mary Ellen Stroble, copy editor.
Richard Poivre, sports editor.
Wanda Goff, art editor.
Tom Pattison, assistant photographer.

- Retro adviser Edgar Henderson marks photos to be "cropped" by the engraver.

- Anne Sullivan, Marilyn Williams, and Alfred Creamer display a pleasing reaction to the '48 Retro.

- Back-work, which has piled up on Gerald Leech, Retro janitor, is quickly disposed of.

Connee Hildebrand, literary editor.
Frances Suite, senior editor.
Darleen Risinger, photography editor.
Max Sumwalt, faculty editor.

FOR FUN AND FINANCES

With the stage set for scenes of supernatural sequences, the senior class of '48 donned their costumes and make-up last April to present Noel Coward's enticing comedy, "Blithe Spirit."

Portraying the part of Madame Arcati, an oddly funny medium, Bonnie Kirkwood provided the jokes which revolved around Ted Besser, as Charles Condomine, who was being haunted by his former wife's ghost, Jackie Drayer. Helen Santilli enacted the part of Ted's second wife, who further complicated the situation when she became involved in a fatal accident and also returned to haunt Ted.

If you thought the farmer's life was a dull one, you had but to see the rollicking scenes of "The Apple of His Eye," a Nicholson and Robinson comedy presented by the class of 1950 in November.

The plot was centered around Marion Pruden, an aged farmer who fell in love with Carolyn Shrack, a girl young enough to be his daughter. Complications set in with the aid of an inquisitive and loose-tongued neighbor portrayed by Ruth Miller. Many laughs were provided by Sue Bantz, who ably enacted the "mean widdle kid."

CLASS PLAYS

The many class plays, speeches, and other dramatic performances given by students represented hard work and long hours of practice before the productions were complete. Those on the make-up, costume, publicity, and property committees were among the many who put in hard hours of toil for small recognition. But on the director rests the responsibility for the performances "to be or not to be" a success. Mr. Philip Hirsch, dramatics coach, not only directed the class plays but also coached students for oratorical contests such as those sponsored by the Rotary Club and American Legion, still having time to display his talents as an impersonator.

The study of dramatics included analyzing actors and actresses from stage, screen, and radio, mastering the types of plays, and presenting various interpretations of them.

Mr. Jack Foster was not with the high school faculty during 1949 but proved himself a capable dramatist and director in the production of "Blithe Spirit," presented by the senior class of '48.

A NUGGET . . . THE PROM

What is it that the juniors look forward to as much as the prom? Why, of course, it's the planning and decorating for the event.

Scenes from Holland and painted dikes surrounded last year's gym while streamers of crepe paper met the wall which was clustered with flowers. The theme was carried out with the traditional windmill and life-size Dutch boy and girl standing by the door of a hut. The throne was situated in the middle of the west side in front of a large painted sailboat, and a carpet extended to the throne. Completing the Forty-niners' rendition of a night in Holland was a large wooden shoe placed on each side of the throne.

"Will it stay?" is the question of the decorating committee.

Cars were lined on all sides of the building. People were hurrying into the gym. As the doors swung open, the majestic rhythm of a band playing in the distance could be heard. Peering on into the interior of the gym—but wait!—were we in the right place? It looked more like a tulip garden; and so it was. The lyrics of "In an Old Dutch Garden by an Old Dutch Mill" might well have been written for this special night, as the gym had been transformed into a Holland heaven for the gala event of the season, the Junior-Senior Prom.

Climaxing the events of the evening was the grand march preceded by the crowning of our Holland Prom Queen, Miss Anne Lewis, by the junior class president, Bill Smith. Serving in the queen's court were Hazel Hampton, Jo-Ann Norris, Ann Herbaugh, and Pat Huston.

The queen was selected by the junior class through secret ballot vote with the candidate receiving the highest number of votes elected and the remaining four as her attendants.

Decorations were under the chairmanship of Bill Davis, with Wanda Goff and Annabel Alexander acting as the art supervisors.

Our own "Queen Anne" was Anne Lewis.

INDIAN TERRITORY

IT was not all clear sailing for the rugged pioneers as they sought to settle on the western frontier. The Indians claimed this land to be theirs; thus the competition for the western land began. Competition is not lacking in high school activities, either. The Forty-niners gave their all on the "battle-grounds" of HCHS. The season started with football, followed by basketball, track, and baseball. Intramural teams staged thrilling contests for those who stayed at school during the noon hour. Upon those who excelled in these sports are conferred special honors and awards.

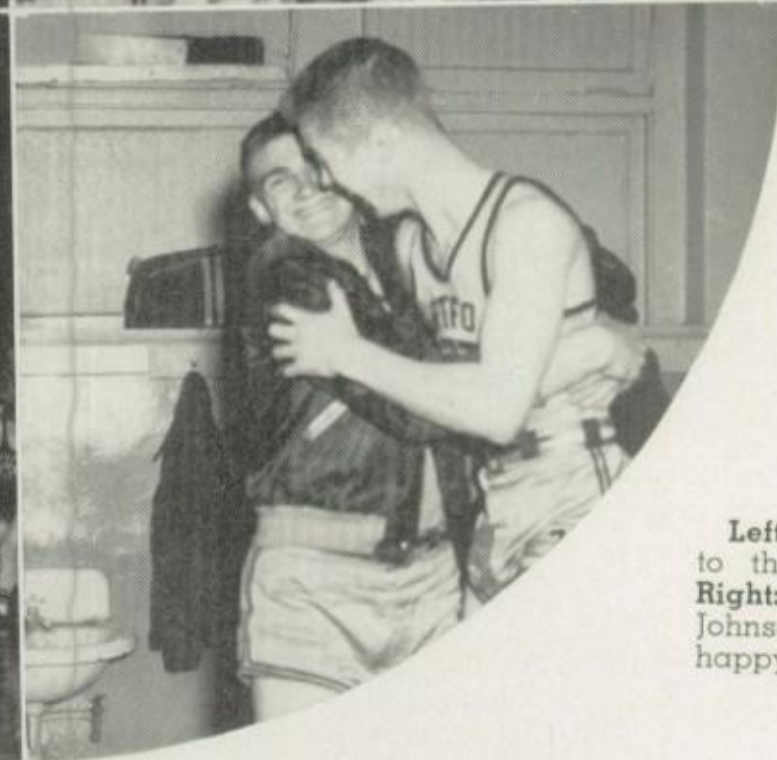

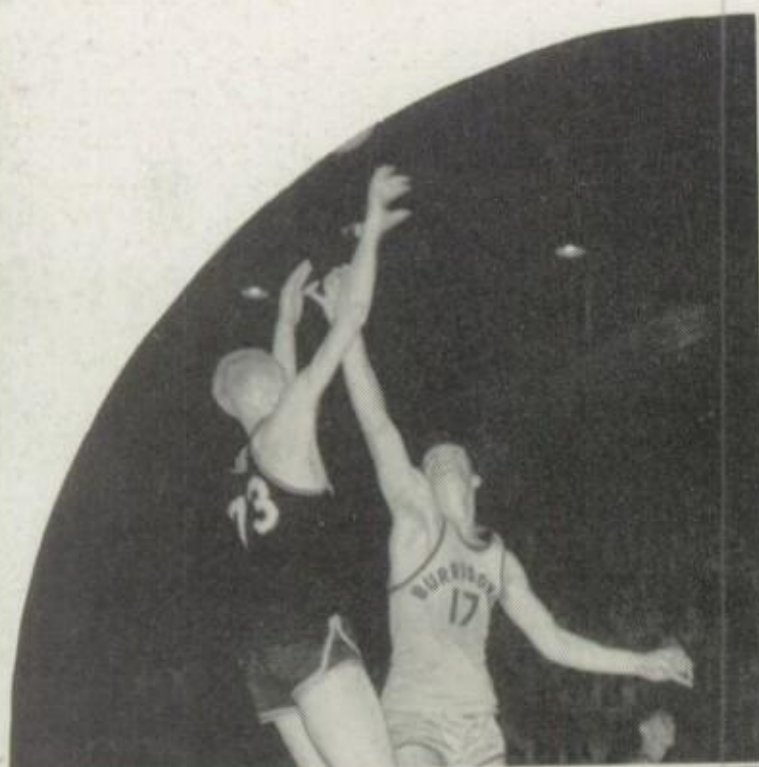

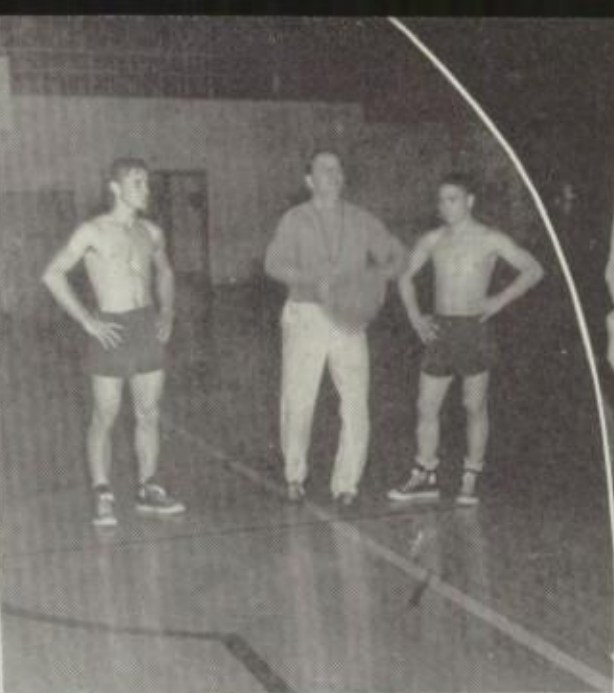

Cheerleaders Suzy James, Doris Shady, Carol Herbaugh, Jo-Ann Norris, and Ruth Miller give out with the "choo" yell.

John found himself with a tremendous rebuilding job, due to the graduation of the entire forward wall and the back-field mainstays. With his winning personality and firm leadership, the likable mentor fielded a cooperative and well-functioning squad which showed fight and the will-to-win in every encounter.

Although the records show an unimpressive record of one win, seven setbacks, and a deadlock, the Airedale gridsters were more effective than is indicated. Many of the reverses could have been racked up on the left side of the ledger if the break had come in the direction of the Black and Gold rather than the opposition.

CINDER TRAIL

While establishing a near-perfect record on the cinders—losing only to Burris Owls—the Airedale tracksters set many new track records which may stand for a long time.

Traveling to Noblesville for a triangular meet in their initial start, the 'Dales came out on top: Hartford City 66½, Elwood 50½, Noblesville 38. Then the Burris Owls administered the only blemish to the Black and Gold record: Burris 58, Hartford City 51. It didn't take the local thinlies long to resume their victory march; they decisoned the Vikes on their next outing: Hartford City 59½, Huntington 49½.

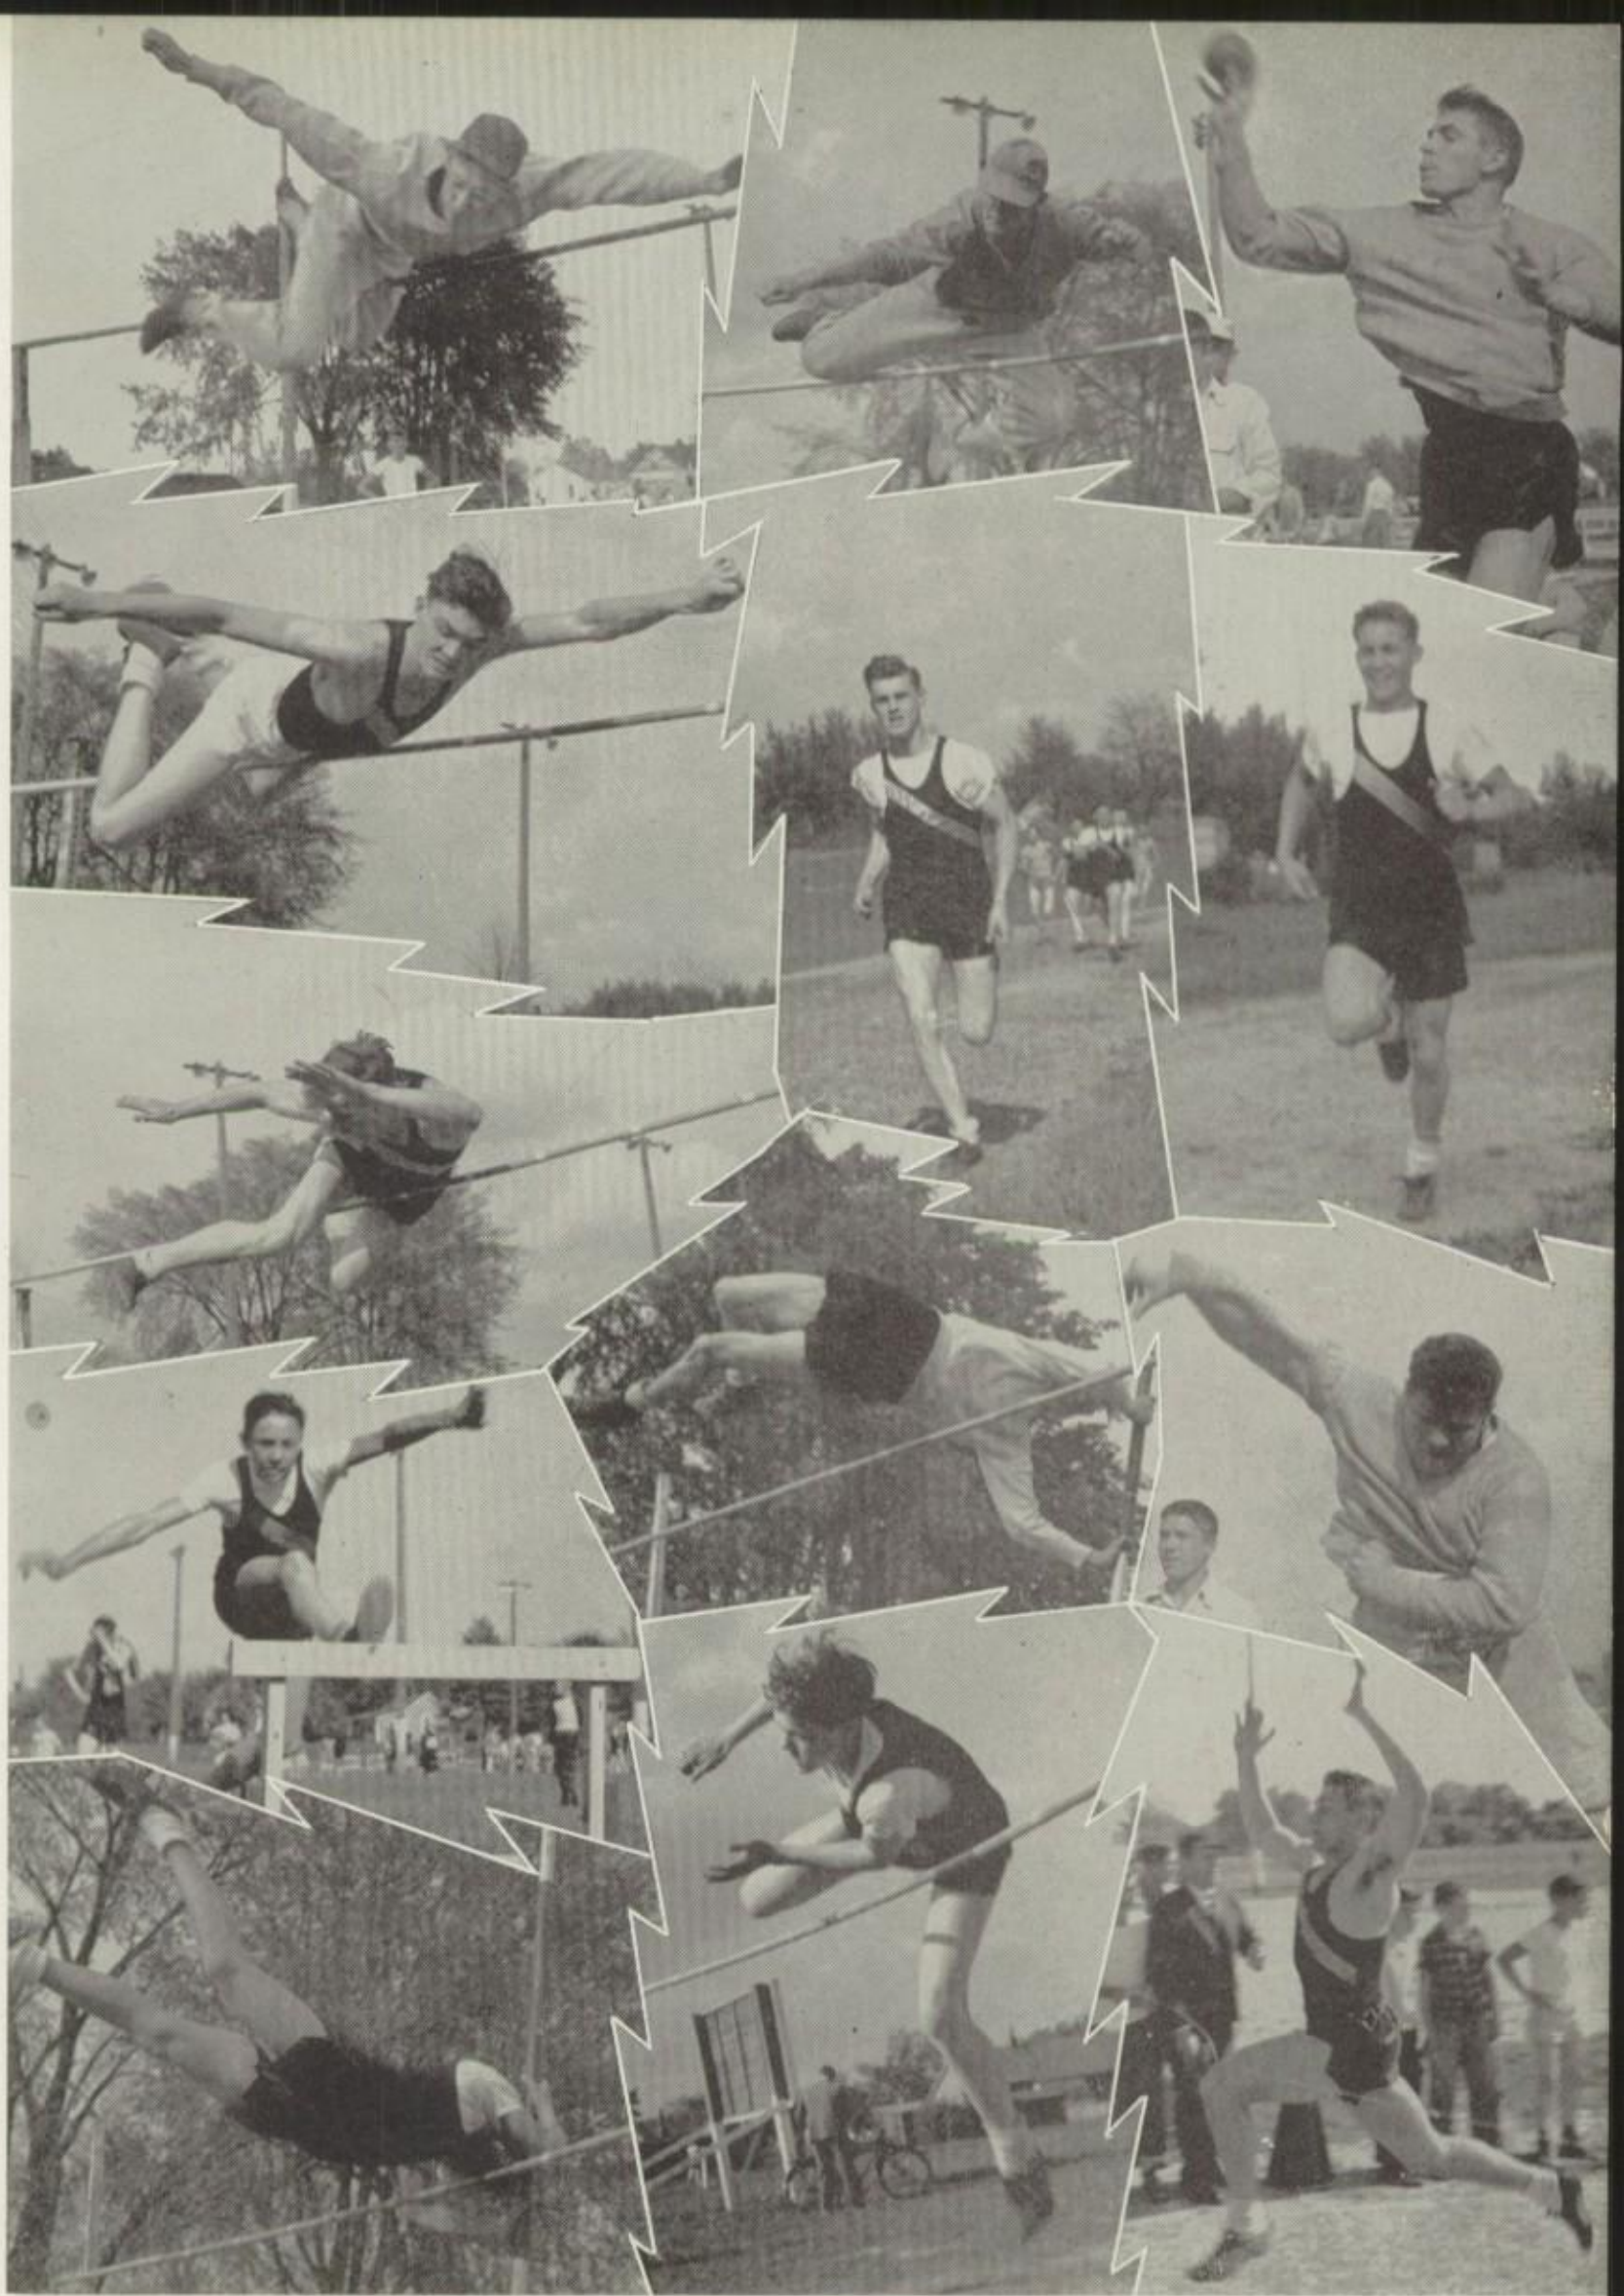

Taking 10 out of a possible 13 firsts, the Aire-dales walloped Bluffton's Tigers: Hartford City 63 1/3, Bluffton 45 2/3.

Bill Shady starts the last lap of a gruelling mile.

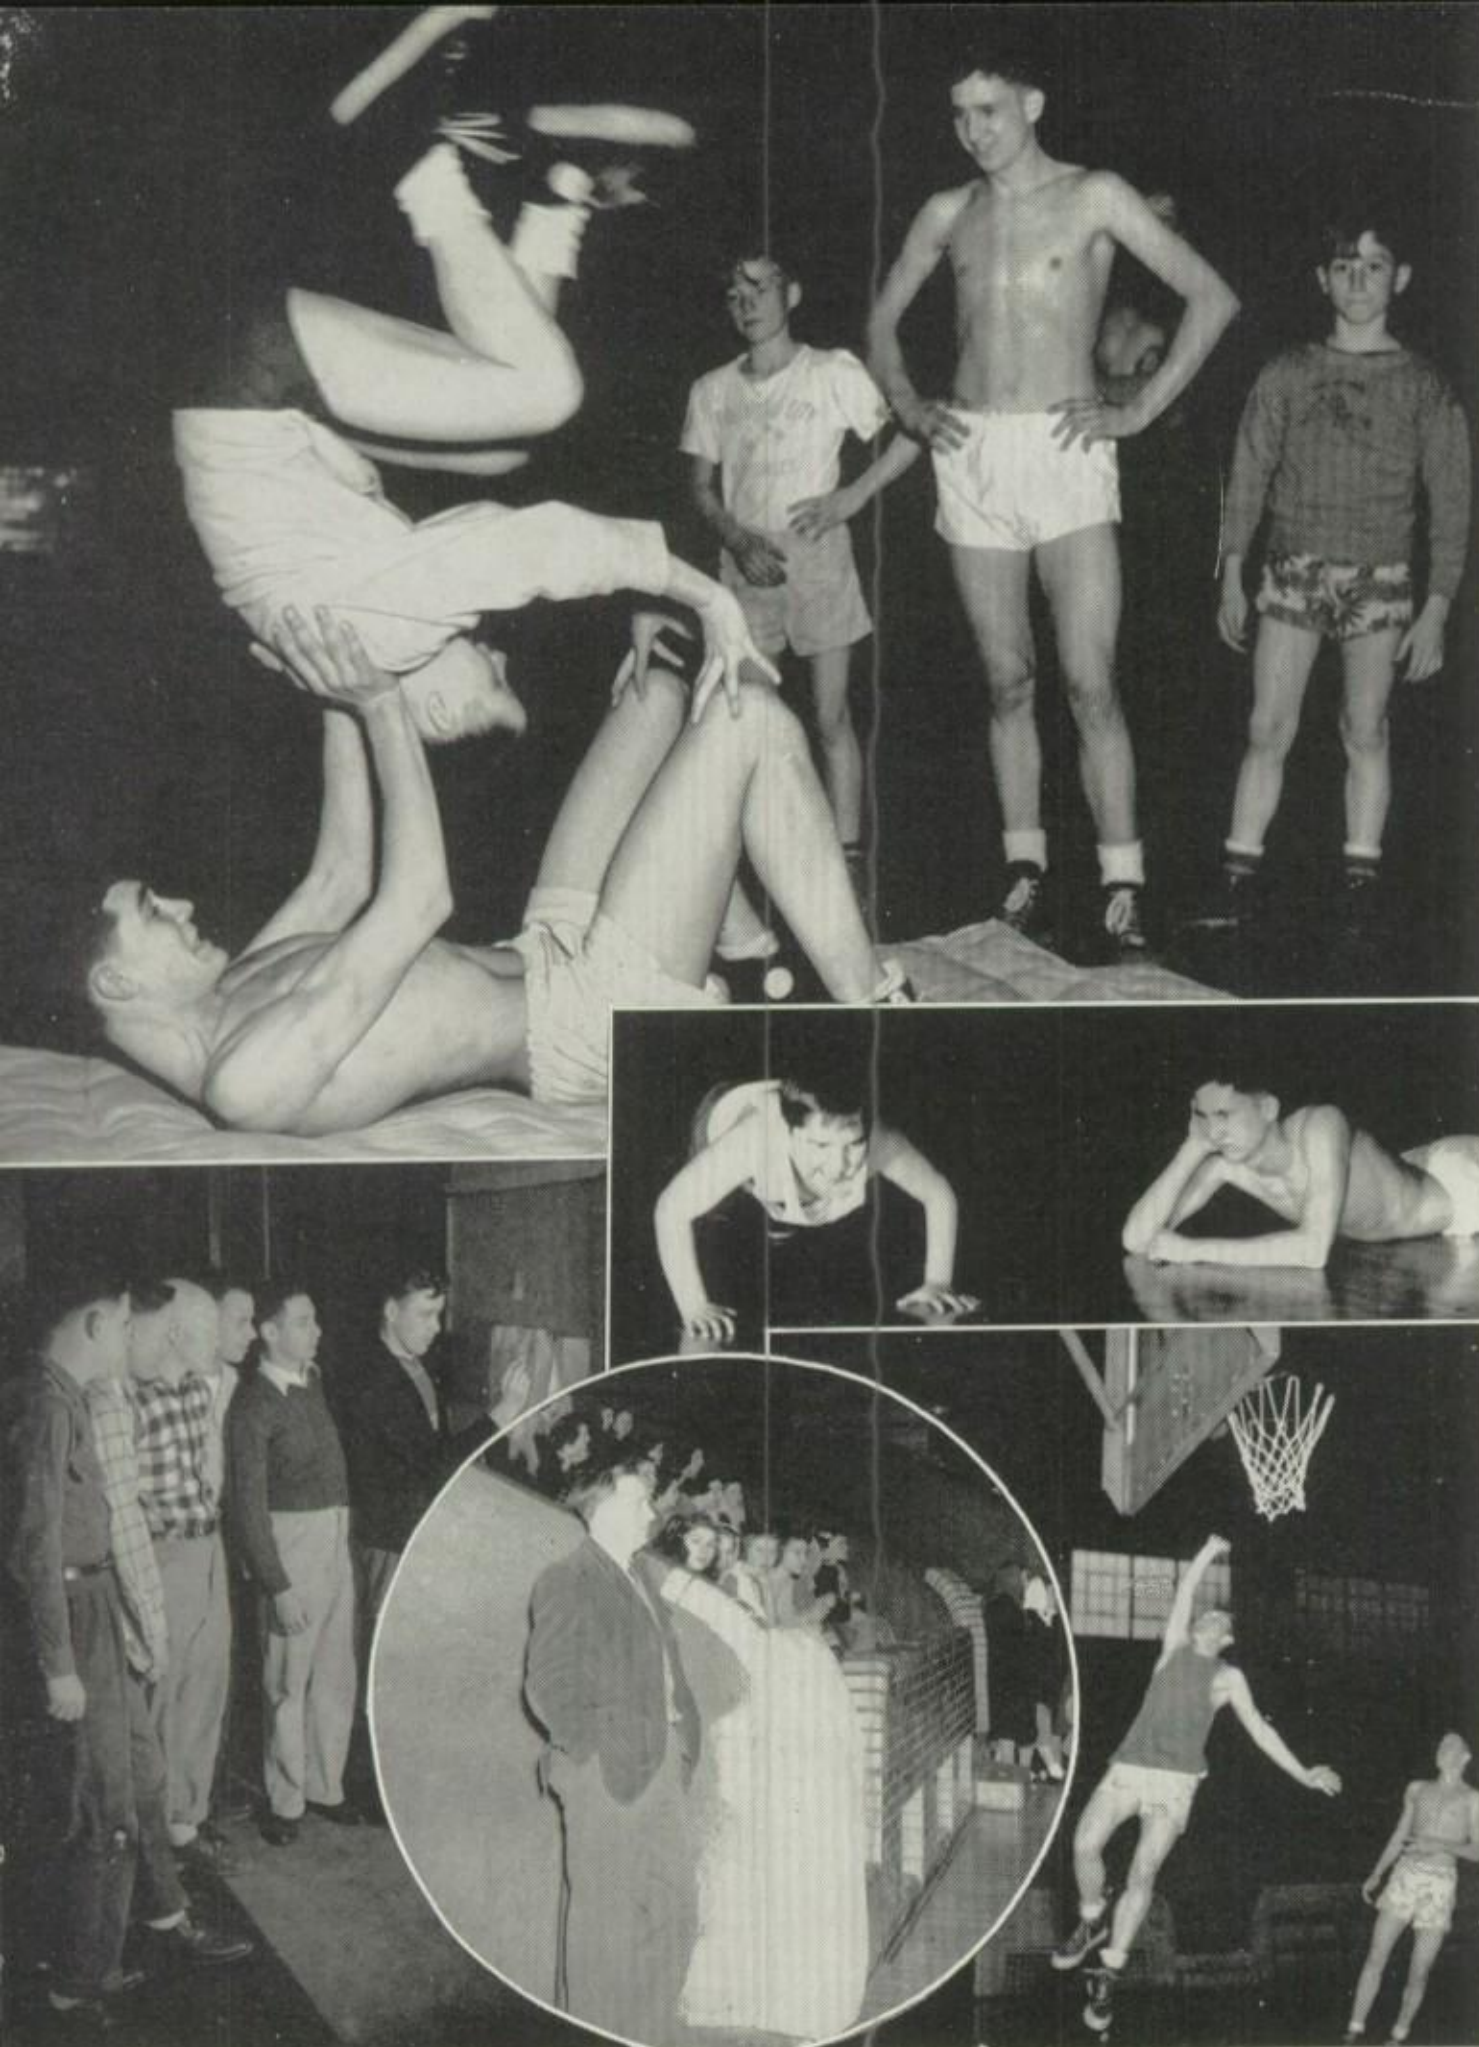

Leonard Ireland, before going to the New Castle school system, guided the destinies of Airedale track teams through several highly successful seasons. "Johnny" was at the helm of the black-gold clad when they captured the Muncie Relays, class B.

Undertaking his second rebuilding task within a year, John Carbone assumed the tutelage of the Canine thinlies, with an anemic list of lettermen to aid his cause. John replaced Leonard Ireland, departed track coach.

EXERCISING EVERY-BODY

Under the capable guidance of Mr. Kenneth Dorton, the noon league again this year served as a means of entertainment and recreation for those students compelled to remain at school during the lunch hour. Considerable interest was aroused in the league this year, and many students gathered each day to witness these contests.

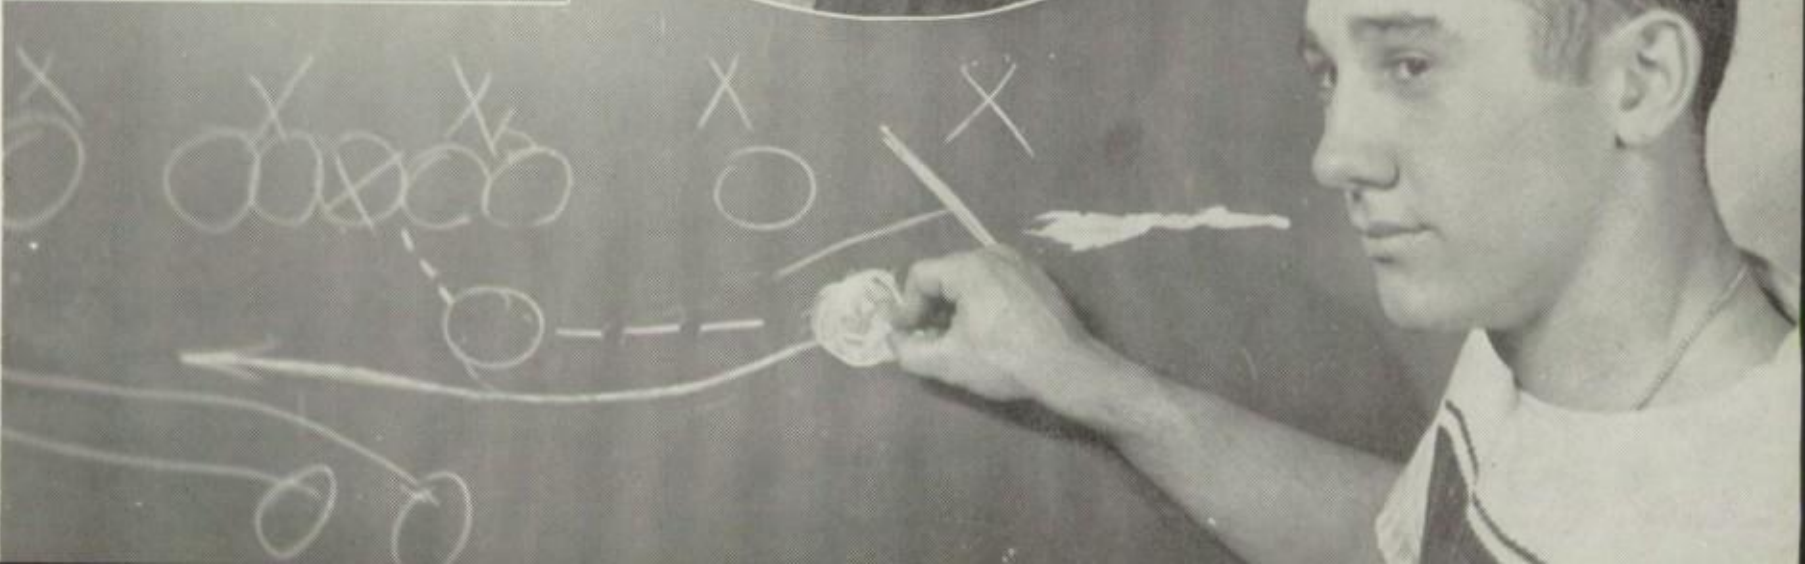

The league provided for many boys the chance to benefit from wholesome exercise and chance to participate in organized athletics under the guidance of competent supervision. The league has been an important extra-curricular activity in the school.

PHYS ED CALLS FOR STAMINA

Physical fitness plays an important part in the Forty-niners' school curriculum of today. A country is only as strong as its people, and the high school maintains that in its physical education program. With every facility available for his use, the student has found no trouble in building up his body to his best advantage. Competent instruction in health classes, movies on body building and nutrition, the swimming pool and actual muscular workout on the gym floor build a stronger "student body."

Disturbing the blue-green stillness of the school pool are Becky Ward, Ruth Mary Ward, and Joyce Bell during a swimming period.

"Stretch—Stretch—1-2-3-4, 1-2-3-4. Come on now, girls. Put some snap into it. Now, a couple times around the gym and you can dress."

Come down to the new gym during any girls' physical education period and you will hear words or phrases just like these coming from the mouth of Mrs. Mary Ellen Herbaugh, girls' physical education instructor. From the time the girls rush down the steps and into the gym, they're as good as "unbent."

On swimming days classes are held in the pool with beginners flopping around in the shallow end and the more experienced "ducks" diving and swimming at the deeper end of the pool with the instructor near at all times.

Much praise should be given to Mrs. Herbaugh for her fine direction in the physical education courses. Her willing smile and helping hand will be remembered by the female Fortyniners as a help through the two-year required course of physical fitness.

AND UP THEY'LL CLIMB

MOUNTAIN TERRITORY

CROSSING the rugged, mountainous country and plunging into unexplored territory, the pioneers of 1849 encountered many difficulties. Pupils of HCHS also experience many hazards in the classrooms of the edifice. There is always that last-minute cramming for a test and the dismay the day report cards are issued. No matter what course you choose to follow, each has its required subjects which bring their share of headaches to the "hard fighting" students of 1949. The tribulations of the Forty-niners were not few; but in viewing the tough moments in the pages to follow, remember that there is reward in reaching your destination.

IN CLASSES, DUTY FIRST

Struggling through those "tough moments" in high school is a very important phase of the student's life. As the Forty-niners of the nineteenth century crossed the rugged mountains and eliminated hazards from their path in order that they might reach their destination, so the student of 1949 removed the barriers which emerged from time to time to slow down the process of education.

Realizing it is such dilemmas and decisions the solution of which provides the major benefits of school days, students weathered the 180 days of classes with an honor roll that indicated a good percentage of students were tougher than the moments.

Taking advantage of the audio-visual aids in Mr. Warner's history class are Janet Linder, Janet Willman, Darleen Hammond, and Ruth Cobb. Used many times a week, the movie projector and strip film provided educational and delightful entertainment to many in the classrooms, club and teacher meetings, parties, and the P.T.A.

Four members of a "Peace Caravan," its members hailing from all parts of the United States, led a round table discussion in Mr. Taylor's civics and economics classes on the causes of war and the way to peace. Other students who are members of the world government class met after school every two weeks to discuss prominent world news and conflicting problems.

Under the direction of Mr. Myers, vocational guidance instructor, Bob Hammond and Joan Bell struggle through the Kuder preference tests, which were given to all sophomores and a few junior and senior volunteers. Mr. Myers was also in charge of the second annual guidance conference to help juniors and seniors choose their vocations.

One way to overcome shyness would be to join Mr. Hirsch's dramatics class. Here Fred Lightle, Darlene Risinger, and Dick Kinser enact a scene from one of their plays. In this course one learns stage terms, areas, gestures, posture, inflections, and make-up.

WE LEARN BY PROJECTS

Studying figures (geometric) are Robert Beason, Stuart Dean Hyde, Phil Blackburn, and Fred Sills. These "blocks" are polyhedrons, planes cutting the diagonal cube, cylinders, and cones. You've probably envied these students for their ability to find square roots and work mathematical problems quickly with the aid of their slide rules.

While browsing in the library, you may have met one of Miss Chalfant's library science students who were always ready to help you with your reference work. Besides typing and filing catalog cards, shelving books, working at the circulation desk, and checking magazines, they prepared books and cards for three grade-school libraries.

Exerting their musical talent are Bob Jenness, Norman Willman, Edgar Jones, Don Rumbaugh, and Shirley Callendar at the piano. Some of the glee club and mixed chorus engagements were at the Christmas program, the band and choral concert, P.T.A. benefit show, Kiwanis, commencement, and baccalaureate. The vocal music department has presented fifty-nine programs for civic organizations.

Dramatizing scenes from "Macbeth" for Mr. Henderson's English literature class are Stuart Dean Hyde, June Lawrence, and Ruth Ann Barley. Quite frequent users of the wire recorder are the band, speech and dramatics classes, and the glee club. This reproduction of sounds enables them to make self-criticism and improvement.

WE GROW IN MANUAL SKILL

What they don't do with scrap paper these days!! Dean Elwood, Joan Crouse, and Ruth Cobb display papier-mache animals made in Miss Willman's art class. Their projects have included making and dressing manikins, stenciling designs on cloth or paper, and designing hot pads for their tables.

Learning the value of clean homes, bodies, and minds are Miss Schaefer's home economics students. They discussed family relationship and the factors involved in making a happy home. Their other instructive units were food preparation, child care, home nursing, sewing construction, and home furnishings.

Advanced art students Zeddie Alexander and Jack Bates created colorful scenes, made oil paintings, and animals which decorated the study hall walls. Miss Willman's artists have made inkings, pastels, linoleum blocks, stenciling cloth, table mats, still life pictures, poppy posters, and the cover for the Christmas edition of The Inkspot.

Girls attending school last summer were required to make two complete costumes in home economics. Besides receiving one credit for their work, the seamstresses learned good grooming, including skin care and hair-do according to figure, personality, coloring, and shape of face.

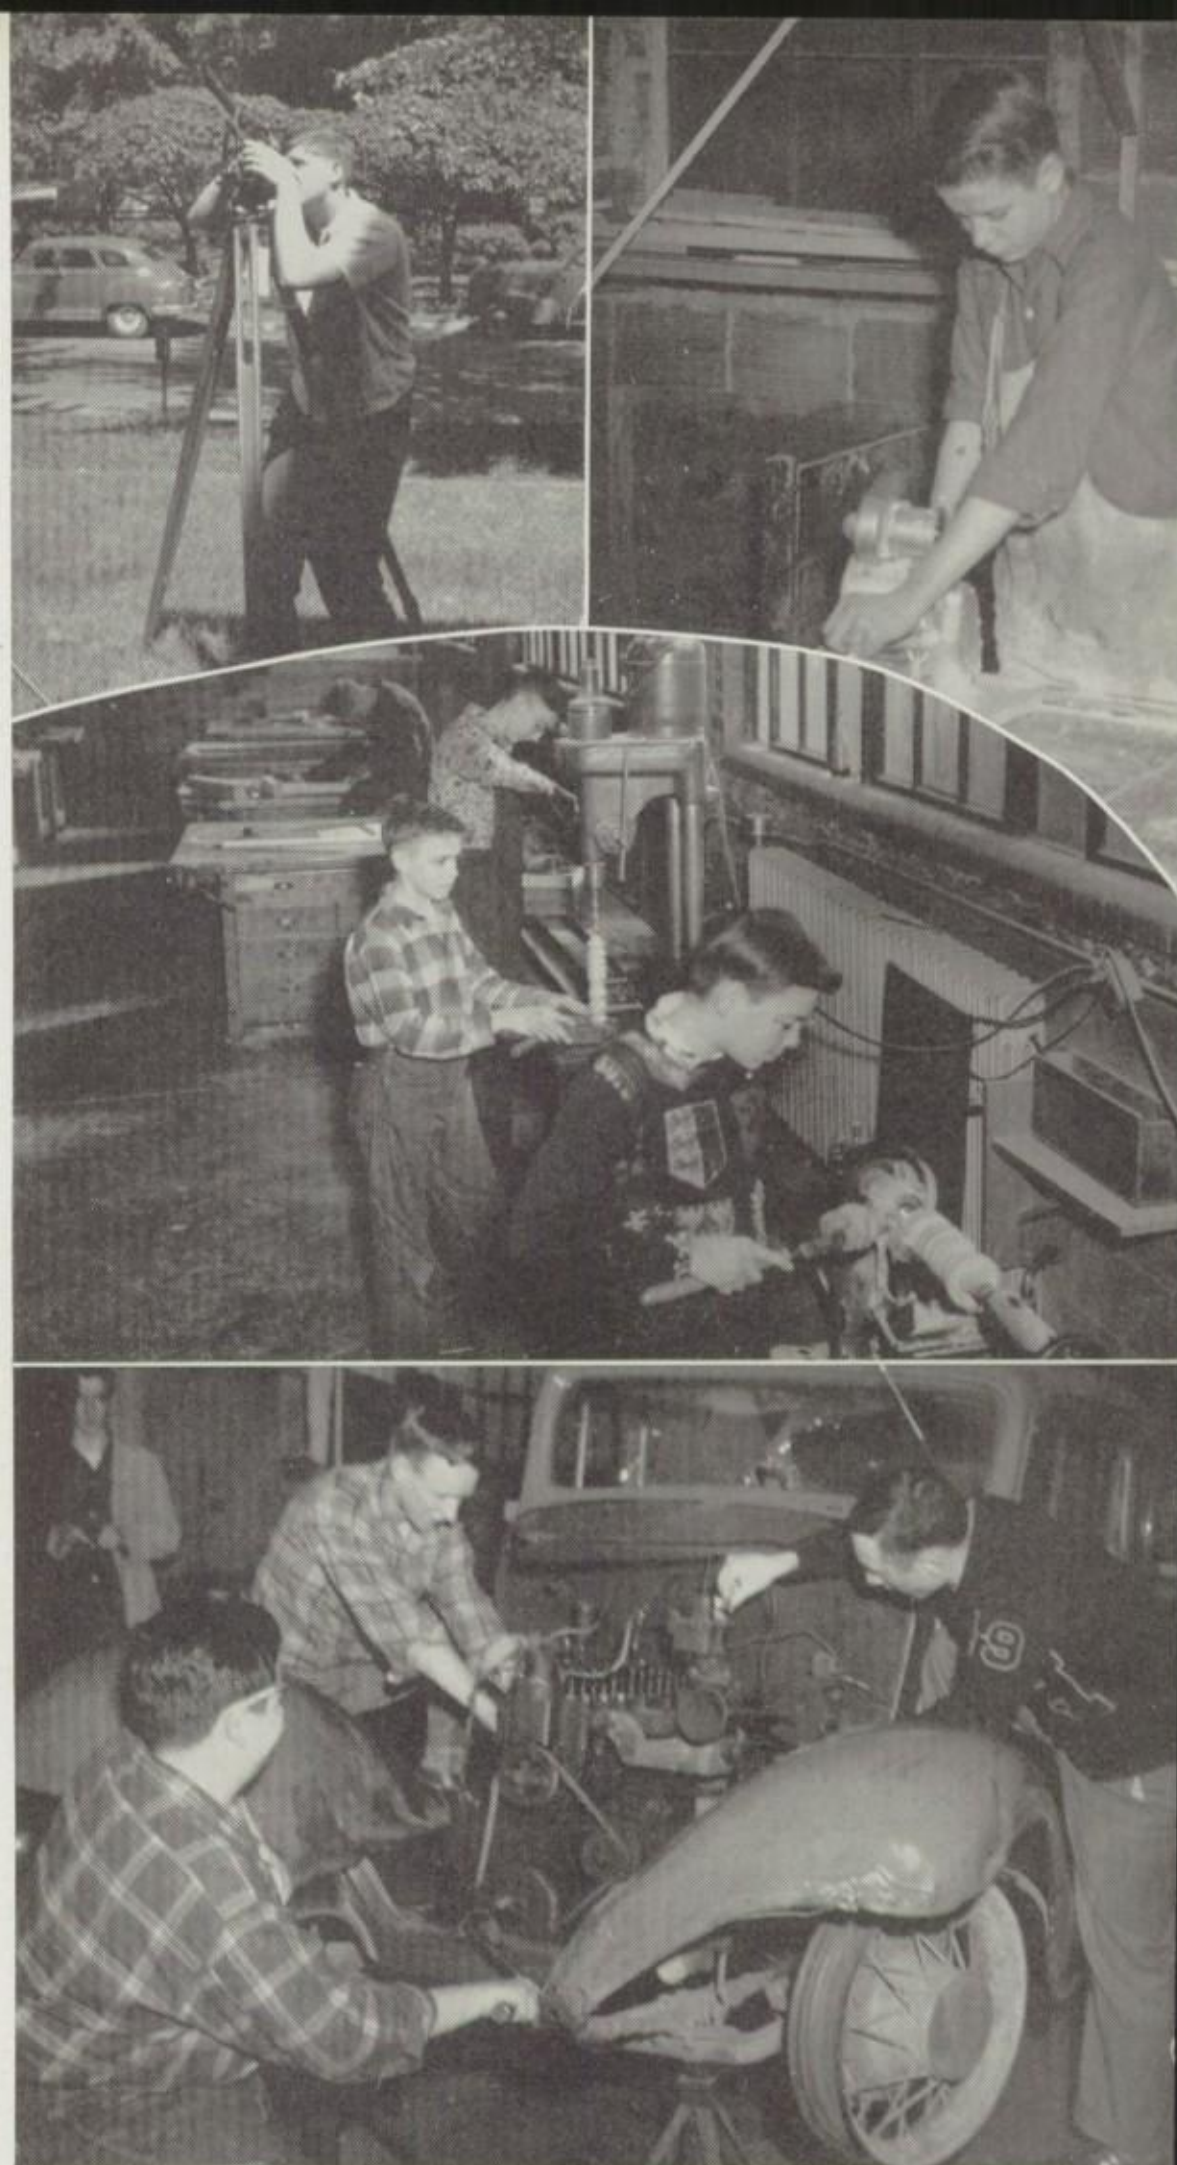

Jack Lord is using the transit, an instrument provided for trig students, enabling them to measure the height of buildings, trees, or any desired construction.

In advanced woodwork Gail Kirkwood uses the sanding machine to smooth off the surface of the wood in his combination magazine rack and smoking cabinet before he applies the first coat of shellac.

Lamps, wooden bowls, ball bats, and ash trays were made on the lathes in the advanced wood shop. Senior student teachers Bill Mabbit, Bill Shady, Dick Kimmel, and Don Morris cut wood for the junior high students. Mr. Carbone taught the freshmen the proper names and uses of the machines, then had student demonstrations. The sophomores were permitted to use the power tools, consisting of a band saw, jig saw, lathe, drill press, jointer, power saw, and a rip saw.

Mr. Michael's metal shop of seventeen boys put their knowledge gained the first semester to use the second when each student was assigned a certain part of a '34 Chevrolet to take apart, explain its make-up and use, then put it back together correctly. Dents were even put in the fenders to be pounded out with a rubber hammer.

Typing, to Peggy Hayes, is a fast way of writing. She displays her typing skill on the electric typewriter, a privilege granted to those students in Mrs. Williamson's advanced typing and office practice classes. These pupils also cut stencils and use the mimeograph machine for the teachers, office, and clubs.

WE PROGRESS 'ON THE JOB'

Service with a smile is offered by Juanita Gardner, who substituted her part-time role as clerk in a local bakery for forenoons at school, under the Diversified Occupations program. Others filling similar clerking positions at various business establishments were John Gadbury, Martha Stone, June Lawrence, Frances Suite, and Janet Overmyer.

Taking radios apart and re-assembling them for Bill's Radio Shop occupied the spare moments of Jimmie Herbaugh. The remainder of his day's labors were spent testing tubes and correcting an occasional fault in a customer's radio. Another radio shop claimed the free periods of Don Garver.

Among the shelves of the public library Nedra Townsend spent her afternoons as assistant librarian. Here, throughout the year, she discharged her duties of checking books in and out, searching for volumes to suit the whim of visitors, and keeping records essential in making the job run smoothly.

Not limited to any special group of vocations, D. O. added the cleaning establishment to its list when Dan Schwarzkopf joined the class. Other enrollees in the service field are Bob Stone, employed at a machine shop, and John Pattison, service station attendant.

Frances Suite and Mary Ellen Stroble took over the North Ward kindergarten for a day and thus demonstrated the school's program to give prospective teachers actual experience in their chosen vocation. The list of "student teachers" for the grade schools also included Virgil Johnson, Rosemary McKee, Janet and Jeanette Johnson.

Marilajeane Bennett and Peggy Hayes here found it unnecessary to go outside the school to find practice as office workers, since the principal's office provided them work during free periods in the form of typing and taking up attendance slips. Patty Jo Schuller, Donna Kellogg, Anita Pownall, Connee Townsend, and Zella Bantz completed the "home office" staff.

Finding her part-time occupation in the office of the ice plant, Patty Huston checked records as a part of her duties as a secretary. Joan Hiser, Barbara Kirkpatrick, Hazel Hampton, Marietta Miller, and Zella Bantz also took time off from their books to do secretarial work while enrolled in the D. O. class.

Trimming wallpaper was only one of the many responsibilities of Charles LeValley while at work in a downtown drug store. Under the D. O. program this senior spent two periods per day on his job. Tom McCrum received his credit for part-time work at a grocery with a position similar to Charles'.

Howard H. Crouse

To the students, school means an everyday routine from September until May, but to Mr. Howard Crouse, principal, it is a year-around life. Besides discipline, supervision, and guidance, the executive's duties include complete charge and authority over the annual sectional basketball tournament.

Trella V. Borden

Executing her duties as assistant principal, Miss Trella Borden has charge of keeping attendance, making out the daily bulletin, and keeping the cumulative records in order. In addition to these duties and acting as dean of girls, Miss Borden serves as counselor to organizations awarding scholarships to high school students.

THEY TAUGHT CLASSES AND

So ye're takin' to the hills fer gold, eh, son? Wall, since I took a likin' to ye, I'll tell ye sumthin'. When ye're eatin' thet sourdough, ye'd give yore whole stake to smell Miss Schaefer's cookin'. Mighty lonely, too. 'Twasn't fer them stories Mrs. Daniels an' Mrs. Wallace had ye read, man couldn't keep hisself company. Bein' kinda lonesome like, ye miss Miss Nesbit's singin', too. Course, ye can see lotsa familiar faces in thet newspaper uv Mr. Henderson's.

Wall, back ta business. I reckon ye got a mule 'stead uv one uv them consarned autos

Mr. Michael's so handy with. Yep, son, ye're real practical. With thet refresher math Mr. Warner learned ye, ye kin tell a cheat a mile away when ye fix ta sell yer gold. But, of yea, ye gotta find it first. Here's some directions ta a vein writ in code. Mrs. Williamson learnt me thet—calls it "short-hand." Ye'll know jist how much dirt ye have ta move, too. Ye did take solid geometry under Mr. Allee, didn't ye? Wall, so long, son; an' keep healthy like Mr. Dorton taught ye.

- RELAXED AFTERWARD

Ain't quite shore it's legal ta shoot a claim-jumper. Put yore six-shooter away 'til you ask government expert Miss Bridwell. Anyhow, Mr. Clark's science might provide sumpthin' ta get 'em out, legal like. Ifen Miss Harter wuz here with her Latin book, might find out whut Caesar woulda done in this case. Must be two uv 'em there, an' two more over thar. Is thet five or six, Mr. Modlin? "C'est quatre, mes amies." Well howdy, Miss Fee!

Could do with some sweet soundin' music now. Ifen Mr. Hawkins'll play "Cricket on the Fryin' Pan," we'll try sum uv thet fancy dancin' Misses Herbaugh learnt us in gym class. Don't git into thet green stuff. Mr. Parks says hit's poison ivy. Slow down a bit. Ain't good to work suh hard. Might git yore health ruint. Thet's so, Miss Greene, ain't hit? If we ever do strike it, Mr. Carbone an' his football team kin cart it away in a box frum the wood shop.

Would shore admire havin' a book outa Miss Chalfant's library, and Mr. Hirsch here ta read me a story frum it. Let's put Mr. Myers ta work! He's been a puttin' everyone else thar. He might be right handy buildin' a shack to store the gold in (if en it's found). We oughta set up Mr. Kerlin as chief counter-outer. He can add sum, subtract a mite, too. Miss Cole is writin' a book about the adventures uv the "'49ers." Yep, it's a histery book.

Mr. Weeks an' the Airedales jest come in by kivered wagon. Had sum furs to trade—Tigers, Tomcats, Speedcats, an' Zebras. Wunder who they got 'em frum? (Missus Frame always did tell me not ta end with a prepysishun.) Them purty western sunsets look like them paintin's a-hangin' in Miss Willman's art room, now don't they? All thet quiet wisperin' must be Mr. Hale an' Mr. Taylor figgerin' out just how ta spend this here gold to make a net profit and do it economically.

Miss Cole, president of the Teachers Association, welcomes the Wallaces to the fall teachers' dinner. Mrs. Herbaugh is in the background.

We, the seniors of 1949, being of sound mind, and having taken over three years of English, on this 20th day of May, in this year of 104-Page Retro, 1949, hereby inscribe to be read (to the Juniors by someone literate), this magnanimous will, whereby we leave the enclosed articles and services pro beneficium publicum.

It's inside.

Class Of 1949
